Beijing International Technology Transfer Network Inaugural Meeting

As China's capital city, Beijing has more technology resources and at the same time more demand for technology. Beijing International Technology Transfer Network (BITTN) is formed as a key exchange platform in the context of an increasingly active international technology transfer market and in a time when China catches the world's attention, recognition and rightful status in the world's scientific and technology cooperation.

After a year of hard work and preparation, BITTN now has partnerships with scientific and technology units in 17 countries. More than 50 international institutions have joined, forming a key international node in the cross-continent and international technology transfer network platform.

The Asia Pacific Intellectual Capital Centre sincerely hopes that the BITTN plays an important and significant role in the world's joint effort in promoting technological innovation, application of technology and international technology exchanges.

We wish the conference and your inauguration meeting a complete success!
